Historic Philadelphia & Flower Show in Philadelphia, PA

Explore Bella Italia

At the 2009 Philadelphia Flower Show

The landscapes and culture of Italy, which have enchanted visitors and artists for centuries, will serve as inspiration for the 2009 Philadelphia Flower Show, "Bella Italia." The celebration of the natural beauty, art, food, music and people of Italy will be held March 1-8, 2009, at the Pennsylvania Convention Center.

A staircase stage will feature operatic performances and other musical presentations, while strolling musicians wander the Show floor. The Central Feature of the 2009 show will capture the majesty of Rome and its formal style and gardens. Show exhibitors also will pay tribute to the other distinctive regions and cities of Italy:

- Milan, the international mecca of fashion and design.
- Florence, the Renaissance city of Michelangelo, Botticelli and Donatello.
- Tuscany, the paradise of lush, rolling hills, vineyards, sunflowers, cyprus, olive trees, and extraordinary cuisine.
- Venice, where water gardens, fountains and canals are an integral part of life.
- Spello, the medieval Umbrian village that celebrates L'Infiorata, a festival known for its works of art made of flower petals and herbs.
- And the Italian Riviera, the resort that will be represented at the show by an orchid-filled atrium.

"Bella Italia" will also highlight the strong ties between Italy and Philadelphia, a city with a great Italian American community, fine restaurants, and, of course, the lively Italian Market.
